INSIDE TIBET

China vows to strengthen Tibet's assimilation ahead of 50th 'autonomy' anniversary

Ahead of celebrations marking the 50th anniversary of the establishment of the so-called Autonomous Region of Tibet, constituting the western half of ethnographic Tibet, China's top decision making body has on Jul 30 vowed to safeguard national unity, strengthen ethnic unity, unswervingly carry out the anti-separatism battle, and promote patriotism in the region, according to the country's official Xinhua news agency Jul 30. The purpose, the report said, was to achieve prolonged stability.

His Holiness the Dalai Lama Expresses Condolences over the Passing Away of Former President Dr. A.P.J. Abdul Kalam

I am very sad to learn of the sudden passing away of our former President, Dr. A.P.J. Abdul Kalam yesterday evening. This is an irreparable loss. He was not only a great scientist, educationist and statesman, but also above all a real gentleman.

Over the years I had the opportunity to meet and interact with him on many occasions and always admired his down to earth simplicity and humility. I used to enjoy our discussions on a wide range of subjects of common interest, but mainly concerned with science, spirituality and education.

I offer my condolences and prayers to his family and the people of India at this sad time.

Long-Life Empowerment and Long-Life Offering in Leh

"Material development and technological progress have had an impact on all our lives. We have better health, we live longer and we are more comfortable than in the past, but the question is whether we are actually happier. If material development alone really brought lasting happiness, people living in highly developed countries should be completely happy. But this is not so."

The New Strategic Importance of Tibet?

by Claude Arpi, July 29, 2015

It is very rare for China to mention the 'strategic importance of Tibet', but it is what an article posted on the portal China Tibet Online recently did.

It explains: "Tibet's strategic status is of great importance. It is an important national security barrier; an important ecological security barrier; an important reserve base for strategic resources; an important base for agricultural products; an important area for the protection of China's unique ethnic culture and a popular tourist destination."

Digital Lady to Dalai Lama -- What This Tech Expert Learned in a Meeting with the Most Compassionate, Connected Man on Earth

by Danielle Di-Masi, July 27, 20015

I asked His Holiness how we can achieve this human connection amid digital isolation. He looked me very carefully in the eyes, paused, nodded, and then said: This is a human problem, not a digital issue, so it must be solved with a human answer.

Communist Reincarnation

By Claude Arpi, July 25 2015

On one side, a senior Lama is left to die in prison, ('China's criminal law stipulates that prisoners serving life sentences are not allowed medical parole', says Xinhua) and on the other, Beijing sponsors the 'reincarnation' process. Where is the trick?

China's stock market crash will make Beijing's biggest challenge even harder

by Mike Bird, Business Insider, July 29, 2015

China has a bigger problem - in short, the growth of nominal GDP (the size of the economy without accounting for inflation) has been dramatically outstripped by the growth of debt in recent years. That's likely to be a bigger issue for the economy in the long term than the current volatility in stocks.
